

Guide to Surrey Census Returns 1871-1901

by Cliff Webb

Introduction

Census returns should need no introduction to the family historian, genealogist, demographer or local historian. They are the very stuff of such studies in the nineteenth century.

I should like to acknowledge the considerable input, to the previous versions of this guide (one covering 1871-81 only) made by Alan Taylor, and by Sylvia Warner (one covering 1871-91) who entered much of it on to a word processor.

The Society's 'Guide to the Surrey Census Returns, 1841-1861', (Research Aid No 5) and this guide are parallel leaflets covering all those censuses which are open at the National Archives (TNA). Many local libraries and record offices have microfilm copies of some or all of the census of their local areas. A directory of such holdings, 'Census Returns on Microfilm, 1841-1881' is available; make sure you consult the latest edition - since holdings quickly become out of date.

The 1871, 1881, 1891 and 1901 censuses were all arranged on the basis of the poor law unions, as by and large were the civil registration districts. These did not necessarily respect county boundaries, and some Surrey parishes consequently appear in the census lists for areas mainly covering neighbouring counties: Lingfield lay in the East Grinstead Union, the rest of which was in Sussex, and Thorpe and Egham were in the Windsor Union with a number of Berkshire parishes. Similarly the Farnham and Kingston Unions included parts of Hampshire and Middlesex respectively.

Two lists are given here. The first, arranged by parish, gives for each census year TNA piece number and the population. The second is in the order of TNA pieces and lists the parishes included in each.

These later censuses have all been indexed. For 1871 a very good index is provided by Origins. The 1881 index done by local volunteers is not too bad. Indexes to all the 1871-1901 censuses are available online through Ancestry.com. However, there are significant errors in these transcriptions and they should only be used as a finding aid, and it may well be necessary to use advanced techniques to find an ancestor, e.g.:

1. The indexers frequently mistook a second (or even sometimes a first) christian name as a surname. These should be searched under.
2. Look under christian names only if they are unusual. E.g. if you know that your ancestors were Henry and Agatha Bloggins. Look under just Agatha (leaving surname field blank) filling in the spouse field as Henry. This will find entries miscopied under Blaggins, Cloggins etc. This technique has many variations using the combinations of search boxes available

Users of the census are reminded that TNA has compiled a series of street indexes to all large towns for each census year. Those for the London Metropolitan area are, inevitably, complex. Users should first look up streets of interest in a book produced by the old London County Council which lists all street names and changes of street names in its area. Incidentally, and to the point here, it also gives the area the street is in, from which the correct street index can be identified. Sensible use of street indexes, combined with the use of name indexes, where they exist, can save enormously on precious searching time.
